CONGRESS. THIRTY-THIRD CONGRESS-FIRST SESSION

Senate, February 7, 1854.

The Chair laid before the Senate a report from the War Department, transmitting an abstract of the returns of the militia of the United States.

Mr. Brodhead presented the memorial of the Religious Society of Friends, of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware, complaining of the institution of domestic Slavery, remonstrating against the repeal of the Missouri Compro-

Mr. B. said that these memorialists were not political Abolitionists; that while he differed from them as to the power of Congress over this subject, he still had the highest respect for their motives.

He also presented six other memorials from the State of Pennsylvan's, remonstrating against the repeal of the Missouri Compromise.

Mr. Pratt presented remonstrances of citizens of Washington and Georgetown against the proposed railroad on Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. Bright, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported adversely on the proposition to construct a new custom-house in Georgetown, D. C.

proposition to construct a new custom-house in Georgetown, D. C.

Mr. Pratt, from the same committee, reported a bill to incorporate the National Hotel Company at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Houston moved to suspend the rules, so as to admit ladies to the privilege of seats in the lobbies of the Senate.

After some debate, Mr. Pettit objected, and the motion failed.

The bill granting land to Michigan, to aid in the construction of railroads therein, was taken up and passed.

Also the bill granting land to Louisiana to aid in the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction of a railroad from New York and State of the construction o

Mr. Hamlin moved to take up the French coliation bill, which motion was agreed to—

The bill was then read, amended, and then

The Senate proceeded to the amendments of the Nebraska bill.

Mr. Everett said that he regretted that the short time which had elapsed since this bill was reported had not afforded him time to exwas reported had not allorded him time to examine the great constitutional questions involved in this Territorial subject, nor even to examine the historical questions necessarily attached to this matter. As he could not enter into these subjects, he would content himself with giving expression to the reasons why he could not vote for the bill as reported. He was an added supporter of the Compromiss of 1850 an ardent supporter of the Compromise of 1850. This bill was an important measure; it was the laying of the foundation of two States here-the laying of the foundation of two States hereafter to become part of this Union, in what was now a wilderness.

He had serious scruples as to the expediency of forming any Territorial Government of the highest order for these Territories at this time. The latest accounts of the population did not give a white population there of over six hundred; and at the election for delegates, there were not over two hundred voters. He entered into this difficulty with some detail, but admitted that the objection was one of time only. These Territories would eventually become as familiar names as States, as Virginia or Ohio.

His next objection to any Territorial bill

His next objection to any Territorial bill was the condition of the Indians. They had been placed in these territories, carried there from their original homes, under the policy of General Jackson, which had for its cardinal of General Jackson, which had for its cardinal point, that there they were to have a perma-nent resting place. He could not do anything to disturb the guarantee to the Indians. It was true that the establishment of a State on the Pacific would, under the necessity of

They were both ordered to be laid on the table and printed.

Mr. Cutting asked the unanimous consent of the House, to enable him to present a remonstrance to the Nebraska bill, made by a meeting recently held at the Tabernacle, in New York, and explained that his sentiments were not in havenous with these who expressed that not in harmony with those who composed that the chair.

Several amendments were moved and adopted, but few of which are of public importance.

On a motion to appropriate $5,991.64 to compensate the mixed military and civil commission appointed to inquire into the subject of governing the armories of the United States by military or civil officers, Mr. Ingersoll spoke with earnestness and effect in opposition to the military government.

Mr. Faulkner commented upon the fact, that the commission had not extended their investigations to Harper's Ferry.

Mr. Pratt said that the investigation at Springfield was a perfect humbug, and was so regarded by all who observed the course of the regarded by all who observed the course of the commission.

Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, said that the real question was one of principle. Discipline was needed everywhere, but that applied to the army was not suited to a body of mechanics. The commission was, therefore, of no profit. Congress was alone competent to determine the question committed to it, and should do so.

Mr. Houston persisted in directing the attention of the House to the fact that the only question before it was that of defraying expenses incurred in past services, whether profitable or not. The several amendments proposed by gentlemen who had thus enabled themselves to speak on the subject, were, therefore, out of order.

Mr. Hibbard sustained this view.

Mr. Stanton, of Kentucky, denounced the

Mr. Hibbard sustained this view.

Mr. Stanton, of Kentucky, denounced the custom of selecting officers from the army to devise and supervise public works in this country. He said that in architecture, civil engineering, &c., there were excellent proficents; and yet no custom-house, no water-works, nor other work, could be constructed without a draft upon the army, and this, too, at a time when the Administration is asking an increase of engineers. Mr. Stanton was called to order for irrelevancy.

Mr. Bissell replied to his remarks, until he also was called to order.

Mr. Dickinson, of Massachusetts, urged the appropriation called for.

Mr. Florence inquired of the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, whether the commission had performed its whole duty. Mr. Houston replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Florence said the question then was simply on the payment of a debt incurred. He hoped it might be at once determined; but he was opposed to paying the military portion of the commission anything in addition to their regular salaries and perquisites. He disapproved of committing to them such duties, and certainly would not pay them more for their, performance than civil officers required.

Mr. Goodrich said that his colleague [Mr. Pratt] was mistaken. There was a divided sentiment in Massachusetts in regard to a Pratt was mistaken. There was a divided sentiment in Massachusetts, in regard to a choice between the military and civil government of the armories, and he was himself in favor of the former.

The motion for the appropriation was finally adopted.

The Committee proceeded to the considerapriation of $1,000 for finishing a marine hos-pital at Napoleon, in Arkansas, submitted by Mr. Greenwood, of that State, and ably sus-tained by Mr. Perkins, who proposed to in-crease the sum to $6,000. Pending its consid-eration, a call of the House was asked. At which point, our report closed.

ORACULAR MUTTERINGS

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.] WASHINGTON, February 7, 1854.

The Nebraska Bill in the Senate has made The Nebraska Bill in the Senate has made some very important progress, auguring well for its final triumphant success. The bill, at the suggestion of Judge Sebastian, of Arkansas, has been so fashioned in regard to the Indians as to completely obviate whatever might have been said on the subject. The appropriate the subject of the bill so as to have been said on the subject. The appropriations were also taken out of the bill, so as to put it in a condition to be at once put on its passage, without going to the Committee of the Whole in the House. The bill is now in excellent sailing trim, for a quick passage—all drawing sails set; just as the New Mexico bill was when it came down to the House in the long session of 1850.

long session of 1850.

The discussion on the Nebraska bill is not likely to terminate this week; but there is every probability that the vote will be taken in the Senate the week following. Nearly twenty Northern Senators have signified their willing-ness to vote for it. The two New Hampshire Senators, Messrs. Norris and Williams, are mong the number.

It is difficult to perceive how Mr. Gadsden can, under present circumstances, return to Mexice, or what good Mr. Soulé can now do in Madrid. Would it then not be best to prevent further bloodshed in Spain, by sending Mr. Soulé to the city of the Montexumas, and to preserve the valuable services of Mr. Gadsden, by sending him as Minister Plenipoten tiary to Madrid? X.

The was true that the establishment of a State on the Pacific would, under the necessity of some communication over the continent, render it impossible to preserve that Indian barrier intact. But if the Indians were to be dispossessed, he desired that more than justice and equity should be done them. But before acting on this subject, he desired full information. If the Indian rights were secured, he had no doubt but he could have voted for the bill passed at the last session by the House.

He regarded the language of the amendment and that part of the bill relating to the Missouri Compromise, as indistinct and objectionable. If it was right in saying the Missouri act was inoperative and void, it would be more direct and parliamentary to say it is hereby repealed. If it was to be repealed, why not say so directly? The substance of the paragraph was more objectionable than its phrascology.

He understood the New Mexico and Utah acts as confined entirely to those specific measure. Washington, February 7, 1854.

Croz, where he will meet our propositions, whatever they may be.

The consent of President Walker to the annexation of his republic to this Union must be had, as well as the cession by Mexico. Captain Walker may, even now, have received and entertained propositions of a foreign alliance. He may be flattered with the promise, as Gen. Houston was, of the next Presidency, if he will assent to annexation, and then be cheated, as Gen. Houston was.

"Messrs. J. P. Jewett & Co. have in press, and will shortly publish, a tale of deep interest, entitled 'The Lamplighter.' The scene is laid in Boston and immediate vicinity, and its author is believed to be a Bostonian, or a resident of this neighborhood. We accidentally foll in with some of the proof-sheets of the work, the other day, and, after reading a hundred or more pages, we have no hositation in pronouncing it one of the most original, interesting, graphic, and affecting tales, thus far, that has lately appeared. It is quite equal, to say the least, to 'Wide, Wide World,' though not what would be called a religious novel. If the work is completed with the ability which is displayed in the first part of it—and we have no reason to doubt that it will be—we predict for it a sale and popularity equal to the most successful of modern romances, such as Uncle Tom alone excepted."—Bevening Traveller, Jan. 27, 1854.

SEGARS! SEGARS! "I can't get a decent Segar in Washington," Is a phrase hourly heard from strangers, in our city Without admitting or denying its truth, the subscriber determined to remedy the evil. To this end, he has made a list of every brand which any gentleman has pronounced "the best segar I ever smoked," and with this document he has procured from the first importers in New York, a stock of these choice brands, and now offers them to the public. Every fumigator, who knows a good segar when he mells it, is requested to call and examine the stock.

HENRY JANNEY.

Penn. av., north side, between Browns' Hotel Jan. 2 and 7th st., third door from the latter.

From the United States Argus. From the United States Argus.

To those persons who may visit Washington, and are in want of a boot that cannot be excelled, either in quality or workmanship, we would call their attention to the card of Henry Janney, to be found under the head of "Washington." A handsome and neatly-made boot is not at all times a source of pleasure to the wearer, but often one of extreme torture; this is caused by the bungling manner in which the boot is fitted to the foot. Mr. Janney has devoted much of his time in studying the construction of the human foot, in order to ascertain how a boot should be cut and fitted, that will be perfectly easy to all parts of the foot. In this he has succeeded, so that it matters not what may be the shape of, or the number of corns on the foot, his boot is perfectly easy. Thus he has combined beauty with comfort.
